

century. The online center is a non-profit, membership, computer library service and research organization used by libraries in 96 countries and territories around the world to locate, acquire, catalog, lend and preserve library materials. Frances Hatch, widow of Orin Hatch, witnessed the gift made in her late husband's memory. He passed away in 1992. Mary Roche, who passed away in 2004, and her husband, Raymond, were residents of Hunt for over 20 years and enjoyed genealogical research at Logan Library.

Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges 2005-2006 pictured in the top row from left to right are: Gillian Friedel and August Blackburn; bottom row left to right: Delma Thompson, Kristen Morton and Amanda Brown. Students are chosen based on their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and their potential for continued success.

Monday Night Fiction Series led off its spring schedule Jan. 23 with a discussion of the John Grisham book "Bleachers." Schreiner University provost and vice president for academic affairs, Dr. Michael Looney, facilitated the discussion.

The Schreiner University Choir performed the national anthem at San Antonio's SBC Center Jan. 24. The choir performed on center court prior to the game between the World Champion Spurs and the Charlotte Bobcats. "It was so exciting to sing at this event and to represent Schreiner University," said choir director Michael Kahl said.

Dr. Ronald Hatchett, director of Schreiner University's Center for Global Studies, kicked off a three-part series of discussions, "People of Faith Thinking about the Middle East" on Feb. 20. His last lecture, titled "St. Augustine, Others and the Just War Theory: How Can People of Faith Think about War?" was April 24. The lectures were so popular that the venue had to be changed to accommodate bigger audiences. Schreiner University Campus Ministry and Young Catholic Adults sponsored the discussions.

Dr. Mary Seay, associate professor of education, presented Schreiner University's Robert P. Hallman Chautauqua Lecture Series Jan. 30. Her lecture was titled, "Hemisphericity: Your Brain and What's in it for You." The lecture series showcases faculty of Schreiner University who are writing, researching and publishing in a variety of academic fields.

Lori Noonan, Schreiner University English major, presented her paper, "She Will Stand on Her Own: Izak Dinesen, Out of Everywhere" at the 2006 Undergraduate Literature Conference in Ogden, Utah in March. The highly competitive NULC attracts submissions from all over the country, of which only a fraction are chosen for the program. In addition to sharing her work with a national audience of peers, Noonan participated in reading and discussion sessions with widely acclaimed writers Alice Sebold, Glen David Gold, Bret Anthony Johnson, and Terry Gifford. Lori's presentation marks the third consecutive year of Schreiner representation at the conference.

Speak Truth to Power lecture series presented the film "Wal-Mart: The High Cost of Low Price" March 22. According to the film's Web site, the movie "dives into the deeply personal stories and everyday lives of families and communities struggling to fight a goliath."

Elizabeth MacCrossan, Schreiner University instructor of English, presented her lecture "Irish Murals of Resistance: What are We Fighting

For?" during her Robert P. Hallman Chautauqua Lecture March 27.

Texas Music Coffeehouse Series March 31 event featured performances by the Josh Murley Trio, Will Owen Gage, and Jay Boy Adams and friends.

Dr. William Woods, Schreiner University English professor, led a discussion about the Anne Tyler novel "The Amateur Marriage" at his Monday Night Fiction lecture April 10.

Schreiner students Jennifer King, Greg Kirkham, Henry Cadena and David Taylor II conducted research on the viewing habits and preferences of KVHC-LP television viewers. It was a project for their senior-level business research course that requires students to participate in actual client-based research. Schreiner encourages student-community research collaboration. KVHC station manager Mary Silver said she is thrilled with the work being conducted by the students. "They seem to have really done their homework and are making the survey a very professional piece," Silver said. Mark Woodhull, instructor of business administration, who teaches the class, said it is a multi-discipline course whereby students can experience the research process within their specific discipline. "I think joint research keeps Schreiner's programs at the leading edge of current educational trends in the country, and it certainly offers a real-world experience to our graduating seniors that zooms beyond a simple academic exercise

Student market researchers left to right, Jennifer King, KVHC General Manager Mary Silver, David Taylor, Henry Cadena, Greg Kirkham, KVHC Executive Director Rick Phipps and KVHC Sales Manager Jim Handley